excitingly different -

colored glass insert drop lanterns of Sarnabrax

After years of patience, perseverance and experiments we have succeeded in bringing for the first time lanterns with glass inserts to America. Designs are typically oriental yet they enhance any decorative scheme and become the central focal attraction no matter where they are used in foyer, living and dining rooms, halls, stairwells, reception areas, cathedral ceilings, dens, hotel or motel lobbies, restaurants, tearooms. They are strikingly different.

In India, Lanterns have been used in temples, mosques, harems, palaces and bazaars of India for centuries. Finely chiseled and hand cast of solid brass, these lanterns bring everlasting beauty to the American home.

Hand crafted with the traditional skill of hundreds of years of experience, each lantern is shaped from a sheet of brass with a wooden mallet. When the desired shape has been completed, the design is either individually hand chiseled or hand perforated. Finally, the entire surface is carefully hand rubbed to a gleaming lustre.

elephant goad or ankush

A MAHUT'S essential weapon to guide an elephant is his goad or ANKUSH. Goads come in various shapes, sizes and designs. We are fortunate in being able to duplicate a few through the courtesy of the Delhi Museum. They are from various parts of India.

Used in the American home, they become the most fascinating decorative accessory. For den, living room, hallway, library or over the fire-place.
